Grasping God's Word

“Study to show yourself approved to God... accurately handling the Word of Truth”

2 Timothy 2:15

“Great emphasis must be placed on observing the small details and the overall design of biblical texts.

The observer-reader is not an impersonal recording device, but rather a person with a specific identity, history, and cultural background- all of which affect what one sees. Readers are not godlike, hovering in disembodied fashion over literary creations; no, readers, like authors are rooted in particular historical situations-in what our authors call “towns.”

Not wreaking havoc on the text is hard work, For it is all too easy to read our own ideas and prejudices into the text.

Accordingly, readers should undertake both serious observation and be honest about their background and their location. Readers must be prepared to have their values and beliefs called into question by the text.

If they do not, they will grasp the Bible in the wrong way, twisting its words so that they conform to what we want them to say.”

Kevin Vanhoozer, Grasping God's Word
